

Cadence Court Quilt Pattern Layout

Cadence Court Pattern Notes:

This is pretty dense quilting, you are going to want to take all the precautions you need to deal with shrinkage including basting.

Even though these are p2p patterns, you still need to make boundaries to make sure the patterns are in the right place. Even a 1/16" of an inch in miss piecing or clicking can make enough of a difference so that the pattern will not properly get placed.

There are 2 different patterns for the pieced block. You can follow the pattern of the flying geese (although personally I think that's too busy), use the cross hatching pattern, or if you can, just ditch the piecing.

If you have a smaller throat you can use the half center pattern, quilt the first half, rotate the pattern 180 degrees, roll the quilt, and quilt the second half.

The background patterns are designed to stitch off the top fabric so be sure to carefully, baste down the edges of the top.
